

As student leaders involved in the Conflict-Free Campus Initiative (CFCI), we condemn any proposed suspension or weakening of the Conflict Minerals Rule. Now more than ever, we support the extension of the rule and call for non-governmental actors — including our universities and high schools — to take decisive action against conflict minerals. This can take the form of conflict-free audits of university contracts, public declarations of support for the extension of the Conflict Minerals Rule, and more. Let’s not miss out on an opportunity to harness institutional power for the greater good!

Helen Shanahan ‘18 B.S. Cornell University

Matthew Indimine ‘18 B.S. Cornell University

Christopher Hanna ‘18 B.S. Cornell University

Kyla Chasalow ‘20 B.S. Cornell University

Ellen Bresnick ‘17 Middleton High School

Jameelah Julien ‘20 B.A. Agnes Scott College

Joel Muhgirwa ‘17 M.S. University of Arizona

Enock Ntekereze ‘17 B.S. Rochester Institute of Technology

Kristine Lister ‘18 B.S. Cornell University

Kai Stuart ‘19 M.A. University of Edinburgh

Jane Dimnwaobi ‘18 B.A. Boston University

Zach Aleksandur de Stefan ‘18 B.S. Cornell University

Madi McEwen ‘18 B.A. University at Buffalo

Savannah Wooten ‘17 B.A. University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Jacqui Johns ‘17 B.A. Georgetown College